Copy from FCI Official Rules and Bylaws for International Field Trials and International Hunting Tests for Continental Pointers / AUTUMN Field Trial for better explanation.

Art. IV.13 No award will be given to dogs which have not made at least one completed point on feathered game as referred to in art. IV.3 and which did not retrieve game. If the dog had no opportunity to retrieve game during his run, recourse is had, preferably immediately after his run, to retrieval of a freshly taken dead game bird.

- A point begins when a dog winds game and points standing and rigid. Next, the dog exercises a commanded approach or a commanded flush, whereby he remains immobile when the game leaves and steady at gunshot. The point is not ended until the handler has leashed the dog or if a retrieve is required, by the authorization to retrieve.

- The fact that a dog points not standing does not imply its elimination, but if it does so without a good reason, even if only once, he cannot attain the qualification of excellent. The fact to repeat such an undesirable pointing should be taken into consideration by the judges.

- If a commanded approach is required the dog should do so unhesitatingly and easily, moving ahead of the handler exclusively at the latter's command and without losing touch with the game. A long approach is acceptable on condition that the approach is energetic, purposeful and effective. Refusal to execute a commanded approach leads to elimination.

Continental Pointers 19

- If a commanded flush is required, the dog should show game in a direct action, exclusively at his handler's command and after authorization of the judge. During this action the handler must remain at the spot from where the flush was commanded. The action should be energetic, purposeful and effective. Refusal to execute a commanded flush leads to elimination.

- The commanded approach and the commanded flush may not be confused with the dog's action to restore spontaneously the contact with the scent before the handler's arrival.

- A country is free to require a commanded approach, a commanded flush, or to permit both.

When the bird will not raise even though the dog is very near the judge might allow the handler to flush the bird (in case of bred or placed birds). This must be decided at the judges' conference and announced to the Team Leaders.

2. The water retrieve test takes place using dead ducks in deep water. Preferably wild ducks should be used, failing which pen raised ducks of similar appearance to wild ducks may be used. The water must be deep enough to allow dogs to swim.

The game will be shot in sight of the dog. The dog is then sent on the handler's command, upon the judge's direction. During the retrieve the handler must stay in the position where the command was given and the dog should retrieve to hand.

The judges will classify the retrieve as follows:

Insufficient: to dogs that do not retrieve the game from water to land

Good: to dogs that retrieve the game to hand but executed with several faults

Excellent: to dogs steady to shot and fall of game, and retrieve upon command to hand in an efficient manner

3. The latest edition of the qualification conditions found in chapter 6 of the FCI canine exhibition regulations shall be applied in the breed conformation, in accordance with the FCI standards for shorthaired and wirehaired Magyar Vizslas.
